E' ora del 4° Aperitivo di Project Management del 2016: Martedì 05 Aprile, presso il Caffè Letterario La Bottega Elea (Pagine e Caffè) in Via Gallia 37b (zona San Giovanni, vicino a Piazza di Porta Metronia): un evento speciale con Ospiti Internazionali del PMI.

The presentation will give a brief overview of the concept of Organization Project Management (OPM) and how this approach can help achieve organizational benefits and objectives. We discuss why PMI decided the time was right for a standard on OPM and will briefly cover the time line from the development of the Implementing Organizational Project Management: A Practice Guide to the beginnings of the Standard for Organizational Project Management. We will give a high level overview on implementing OPM and the development of organization-specific methodologies.

Norman K. Prevost, PMP, CSM is currently a Senior Consultant, Instructor and Project Manager for the PPM Practice at BlumShapiro, an accounting, tax and business consulting firm. Norm develops Program Management Offices (PMO's) for companies as well as building out their project, program and portfolio management processes and standards. Norm has over 20 years' experience working in project, program and portfolio management in the Utility, Financial and Manufacturing industries. Norm is the chair for PMI's Standard for Organizational Project Management and was co-author of PMI's practice guide, Implementing an Organizational Project Management Methodology, as well as an international speaker on the topics of OPM and project management. Norm is a certified Project Manager Professional with the Project Management Institute (PMI), has a master's certificate in Project Management with George Washington University and also a Certified Scrum Master (CSM) with the Scrum Alliance. He is a 2008 graduate from PMI's Master Leadership class. Norm is also a certified facilitation trainer with Leadership Strategies and teaches course both publicly and privately. In addition he is past president of PMI's Southern New England Chapter, one of several roles he has held during the past 10 years.

Joseph A. Sopko, PMP, MSP, P3O is an organizational project management improvement consultant, trainer and a joint recipient of the 2013 Shingo Prize Research Award as a contributing author to The Guide to Lean Enablers for Managing Engineering Programs. With over 25 years of active project and program leadership experience in large and small organizations, Joe has served in a wide range of operational and project leadership roles both during his career in the US Navy and in the commercial sector, including eight years as an organizational improvement consultant at Siemens. For the past ten years, Joe has had considerable involvement in organizational project and program management infrastructure development and improvement initiatives including global standards development and advisory committees with PMI, APMG and ISO.

Dave Gunner MSc, PMP, PfMP has over 25 years' extensive experience in project, program and portfolio management and currently works for one of the worlds' largest multi-international information technology corporations. His experience extends from managing projects, programs and portfolios through to the management of the company's UK & Ireland's Java capability and both the creation and heading up of its Project and Program Management Academy. The setting up of the PPM Academy was underpinned by extensive work with Cranfield University, which included the development of various approaches to treat complexity in both projects and programs. He has worked closely with PMI for many years, including chairing the committee that produced PMI's Navigating Complexity guide. Dave is also a member of PMI's consensus body and the PMP role delineation steering committee. He is currently the vice-Chair of the committee responsible for the latest versions of PMI's – Project Management Competence Development Framework and the OPM Standard. In addition he also regularly presents at various PMI events and congresses. Dave is the holder of the PMP certification since 2003 and is one of the few to attain the PfMP certification. He also has an MSc in Project and Program Management from Cranfield University. He lives with his wife and two children in Shrewsbury, UK.
